The US Treasury updated a table last week that is used to calculate the domestic content of solar, onshore wind and storage projects to determine whether they qualify for bonus tax credits. The updated table is in Notice 2025-08. The updated table applies to domestic content calculations starting.

On May 16, 2024, the IRS issued Notice 2024-41, which significantly simplifies the calculations to determine if solar, onshore wind and battery projects qualify for a 2% or 10% bonus tax credit for using enough domestic content under the Internal Revenue Code sections 45, 45Y, 48 and 48E. This.

The IRS has recently introduced new guidelines that simplify the process for qualifying for a 10% bonus tax credit, which is important for companies in our industry. Let's break down what this means for developers, investors, and the future of solar energy in America. Understanding the New Elective.

If you invest in renewable energy for your home such as solar, wind, geothermal, fuel cells or battery storage technology, you may qualify for an annual residential clean energy tax credit. The Residential Clean Energy Credit equals 30% of the costs of new, qualified clean energy property for your.

To access this domestic content bonus credit, developers can rely on U.S.-made iron and steel and an array of solar, wind, and battery components that are already domestically produced.<sup>1</sup> Additional domestic capacity, including for segments where U.S. capacity is limited or still in its nascency, is.

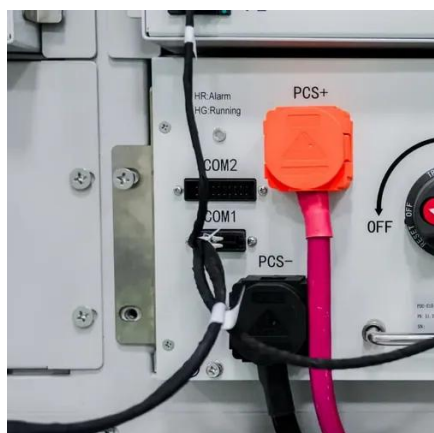

When the Inflation Reduction Act (IRA) was passed in 2022, it introduced the Domestic Content Bonus Credit to incentivize American businesses to use domestically produced materials in their solar and clean energy projects. The goal is to strengthen U.S. leadership in clean energy manufacturing and.
